Buchu, as prepared by Druggists generally, is of a dark color. It has plant that emits his fragrance, the solide of a flame destroys this (his active principle), leaving a dark and gloulanous decocition.—Mine is the color of impredients. The Bachu in my preparation predominates the smallest quantity of the other ingredients are added, to prevent fermentation; upon inspection, it will be found not to be a tinctive, as made in Pharmacopea, nor is it a syrup—and therefore can be used in case where fever or inflammation exists. In this you have the knowledge of the ingredients and the mode of preparation.

Honius that you, will favor it with a trial, and paration.
